What Is It ?

Dyslexia is an inherited neurological difference, resulting in language, perceptual, processing and attention/concentration differences.

Dyslexia can make it very difficult for a student to succeed academically in the typical instructional environment.

Dyslexia occurs in people of all backgrounds and intellectual levels.

People who are very bright can be dyslexic. 15-20% of the U.S. school population has dyslexia; however, only 5% of individuals with dyslexia are ever properly diagnosed and given appropriate help.
